ACCESS INTEGRATED TECHNOLOGIES DELIVERS 20th CENTURY FOX'S LATEST RELEASE, "ROBOTS," TO THE DIGITAL BIG SCREEN

- Digital Cinema Technology Creates New Content Distribution Opportunity for Pillar Entertainment -

MORRISTOWN, N.J. - March 14, 2005- Access Integrated Technologies, Inc. ("AccessIT") (AMEX: AIX) today announced its Access Digital Media subsidiary has digitally delivered and projected Twentieth Century Fox's ("FOX") newest release, "Robots." The animated film, featuring the vocal talents of Ewan McGregor, Halle Berry, Robin Williams, Greg Kinnear, Jennifer Coolidge, Mel Brooks, Amanda Bynes and Drew Carey, opened nationally Friday, March 11th in both digital and analog formats.

Under its commercial agreement with FOX, AccessIT provided digital content management and secure delivery of the film, via satellite, to 16 AccessIT digitally equipped theaters across the U.S. A total of 18 screens are booked to show the film through this agreement. "Robots" is the 11th major studio release delivered digitally by AccessIT.

Russell Wintner, President and COO of Access Digital Media, commented, "We are pleased to be working with FOX to deliver its latest feature film and look forward to the opportunity of working with them on the digital distribution of future feature film releases."

Julian Levin, Executive Vice President of FOX, added; "FOX has recognized the many advantages afforded by digital distribution and its impact on the way we bring our products to market. Through its unique service capabilities, AccessIT has demonstrated its understanding of the challenges and opportunities digital cinema presents to the filmed entertainment business. The successful digital distribution and presentation of 'Robots' underscores the significant potential and promise of digital cinema."
